

MASTER YOUR MORTGAGE FOR FINANCIAL FREEDOM

OTHER WEBSITES OF VALUE

www.burnyourmortgage.ca

Sean Cooper has a great 'Blogs' page where he interviews a whole host of experts on subjects such as personal finance and home ownership, mortgage and real estate strategies.

www.maplemoney.com

Tom Drake is one of Canada's better-known personal finance bloggers. On his site you can learn about the various types of credit cards (cashback, student, no-fee, etc), various types of investment channels such as robo-advisors and discount brokerages and how to make, save, invest and spend money...wisely. Tons of podcast interviews with personal finance specialists.

www.moneysense.ca

A good number of Canada's brightest personal finance freelancers provide content for the MoneySense site and you can find information on anything from RRSP's and TFSA's to dividend investing to retirement advice and case studies.

www.practicalmoneyskills.ca

Budgeting, saving, credit (debt and scores), identity theft...a wide range of resources for learning the basics of personal finance. Almost anything you would care to learn about money.

www.thereinvestors.ca

Steve and Randy provide education on real estate investing – not just the traditional methods many people think about. Young and dynamic, these two are dedicated to educating Canadians on how to improve their wealth through flexible and novel approaches to participating in this sector.

www.milliondollarjourney.ca

FT describes his journey to financial freedom and the tips and tools he used to get there. Lots of discussion on various strategies, tax-sheltered investments, credit and debt management and personal finance book reviews.

www.exploreficanada.ca

A trio of self-described 'financial independence fanatics' share their thoughts on strategies for financial independence and interview Canadians about their experiences.

www.figarage.ca

Affiliated with exploreficanada.ca. Ever listened to a group of people discuss personal finance while drinking beer? A novel and entertaining approach to educating Canadians how others have achieved financial independence (or are on their way...)